Chalk Dust to Summer Skies

April's Dawn, a Fresh New Start,
 With shining books and hopeful heart.
 New timetables and goals so bright,
 New dreams take wing in morning light.
 The smell of pages, crisp and neat,
 A journey begins, both brave and sweet.

May arrives with tests in tow,
 Unit exams begin to show.
 Pens rush fast, minds stay tight,
 Counting days till holiday's flight.
 "How many left?" the children say,
 Longing for June's golden ray.

June brings joy, the school gates close,
 A time to rest, to dream, repose.
 No bells, no bags, just skies so blue,
 Trips to hills, or villages too.
 Grandparents' tales by lantern's glow,
 Mangoes, laughter, sunsets slow.
